Go 4th, have fun

Tech. Sgt. Jim Moser
Public affairs

Columbus AFB hosts this year’s Go 4th 2002 Independence Day celebration with gates opening at 3 p.m. Thursday on the flight line.

This free event features three bands, headlined by country music star Doug Stone, vendors, a children’s play area and fireworks.

“This year’s Go 4th is bigger and better than ever,” said Maj. Johnny Barnes, chairman of the Go 4th committee. “A lot of time and effort have been put into the planning. I think we have covered all the angles, from security to how we will feed our volunteers. The musical line up has something for everyone. The fireworks package is spectacular. And to top it off there is no admission fee. What else could anyone want?”

The opening ceremony starts at 4 p.m. and is followed by musical entertainment from the bands “Bone Pony” at 4:15 p.m., “24-7” at 5:45 p.m. and Doug Stone at 7:30 p.m.

The “Concert in the Sky” fireworks display starts about 9 p.m. Music accompanying the fireworks will be simulcast on WACR 103.9 FM.

“This year, more than ever, I feel it’s imperative we show the world we stand united — one people, one nation, one community — celebrating and giving thanks for the freedoms we hold so dear,” said Col. Tom Quelly, 14th Flying Training Wing commander. “I’m looking forward to this opportunity to come together with millions of other Americans around the world to celebrate and have fun. Bring your family and friends to help us celebrate our country’s 226th birthday.”

The 14th FTW Safety Office offers these tips to help keep Go 4th safe and enjoyable.

- ❑ Dress for the weather and wear comfortable walking shoes. A hat, sunglasses, sunscreen and non-aerosol insect repellent are recommended.

- ❑ Bring lawn chairs or blankets to sit on.

- ❑ Bring a stroller or wagon for young children.

- ❑ Leave the dog, roller blades skateboards and coolers at home.

- ❑ No glass bottles or containers, please.

- ❑ Bring a flashlight for the kids.

- ❑ No personal fireworks or sparklers.

Shuttle buses will pick up military family housing residents beginning at 4 p.m. at each housing area and take them to the event. Housing residents can also use these same shuttles to return when the event is over.

Base residents wishing to ride bicycles to Go 4th should secure their bikes. No bike riding, roller blading or skateboarding is allowed through the event site. Pets are not allowed.

People driving to the event may park anywhere south of Simler Boulevard and walk to the event site or park with the normal flow of Go 4th visitor traffic.

State and Magnolia Village residents can park south of Simler Boulevard by entering at Second Street or park with visitor traffic.

20 selected for promotion

Columbus AFB celebrated the selection of its newest master and technical sergeants at a party Friday.

Commanders and first sergeants informed three new master sergeants and 17 new technical sergeants of their selection June 27.

“Everyone else was more nervous about me getting selected then me,” said Staff Sgt. (Tech. select) Rodney Fisk, 14th Medical Group. “I’m very happy about being selected, but I think my wife was more excited than I was when we got the news.”

Congratulations and ear-to-ear smiles abounded at the event which featured free food, drinks and snacks in honor of the new selectees.

“I’d like to thank all the other selectees and the folks at the services division, Mr. Henline, [1st] Lt. Exner, Mr. Nunn and Master Sgt. Tennant for helping make this party a success on such short notice,” said Tech. Sgt. (Master select) James Bailey, 14th Communications Squadron. “This is just one of the benefits of being a club member and supporting our enlisted club”

Officials release promotion data

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas — Air Force officials selected 6,340 of 19,081 eligible technical sergeants for promotion to master sergeant, a 33.23 percent selection rate; and 11,571 of 34,530 eligible staff sergeants for promotion to technical sergeant, a 33.51 percent selection rate.

The master sergeant selection for the 02E7 cycle dropped 5.75 percent from last year, while this year's technical sergeant rate for the 02E6 cycle changed little from last year's 33.39 percent.

Air Force officials released both promotion lists June 27.

The complete list of selectees is posted on the Air Force Personnel Center's Web page at www.afpc.randolph.af.mil.

“We are beginning to see tech and master sergeant promotion rates level off as we near the goal of increasing the ‘top five’ enlisted grades from 48 to 56 percent (of the enlisted force) — a goal we’ll reach by 2003,” said Chief Master Sgt. Mark Billingsley, enlisted promotions branch chief for AFPC.

An increase of nearly 1,050 people eligible for master sergeant coupled with a slight decrease in the number of overall master sergeant vacancies caused the rate to dip slightly this year, according to Billingsley. But, the promotion rate for technical sergeant remained about the same because while the number of vacancies decreased slightly as expected, the eligible population decreased as well.

People who tested are expected to receive their score notices in early July, allowing them to see just how their Promotion Fitness Examination and Specialty Knowledge Test scores rank against those they are directly competing with for promotion within their Air Force specialty code. Individuals can also get an electronic copy of their score notice, not available until mid-July, by clicking on “vMPF” at www.afpc.randolph.af.mil.

The average selectee score for the master sergeant test cycle was 345.53 points based on the following:

- ❑ 134.34 Enlisted Performance Reports;
- ❑ 70.75 Promotion Fitness Examination;
- ❑ 64.78 Specialty Knowledge Test;
- ❑ 26.83 time in grade;
- ❑ 35.73 time in service; and
- ❑ 11.78 decorations.

The average selectee has 3.39 years time in grade and 16.91 years in service. Those selected will be promoted to master sergeant beginning in August through July.

The average selectee score for the technical sergeant test cycle was 323.73 points based on the following:

- ❑ 132.58 Enlisted Performance Reports;
- ❑ 62.41 Promotion Fitness Examination;
- ❑ 54.97 Specialty Knowledge Test;
- ❑ 37.95 time in grade;
- ❑ 28.21 time in service; and
- ❑ 6.65 decorations.

The average selectee has 5.30 years time in grade and 12.99 years in service. Those selected will be promoted to technical sergeant beginning in August through July. (Courtesy of AFPC News Service)

Supervisors: Recognize troops with more than awards

Chief Master Sgt. James Roy
Wing Command Chief Master Sergeant

Read these two statements and pick the one that is a form of recognition.

“Airman Smith you’ve done a great job on your monthly report.”

“... and our company grade officer of the quarter is ... Capt. Smith.”

Did you pick sentences one or two? If you said both, you’re right.

OK OK I know it was a trick question, but sometimes we supervisors lose sight of what recognition really is. Anyone can read a dictionary, so let me give you Jim Roy’s definition of recognition: “Acknowledging people’s contributions.”

And I can tell you it has little impact unless the person on the receiving end considers the recognition sincere.

If you take a look at the results of military exiting surveys, you will find the number one reason people are leaving the Air Force is the lack of recognition, or a sense of worthlessness to the organization.

Likewise, the recent Chief of Staff of the Air Force results, both Air Force-wide and locally, showed people seemed somewhat dissatisfied with recognition.

When I originally began to decipher these statistics, I thought our folks were saying we had no “formal recognition program.” I just didn’t understand. How could someone say we didn’t have any recognition programs. There are quarterly and annual awards and just about every functional area has their own awards program. The squadrons and shops I’ve been associated with usually had an individual or team award program. I became very defensive ... how could someone think we don’t recognize our people.

But after numerous question and answer sessions at Informed Decision seminars, Airman and NCO calls, and just plain talking to people, I realized they were not talking about “formal” programs but rather the informal “pat on the back” for a job well done. This is usually one of the most difficult yet most important tasks for supervisors at all levels.

Supervision is a dynamic environment, and you have to be engaged every second if you want to be successful.

I classify supervisors in to three categories:

Category One — The Jobbers ... that is, those who are so engrossed in the demands of the job they fail to understand who actually does the work. They take our most valuable resource (people) for granted.

Category Two — The Buddy ... supervisors described this way are too engrossed in making sure they are “liked” by everyone. They are too concerned about upsetting someone for changing the “shop norm.” What they fail to realize is they often begin to lose respect of all because of their failure to take a stand.

Category Three — The On-Target Supervisor ... these folks are able to build a team that produces results. The key to team building is ensuring your people have a sense of worthiness and know you recognize their contributions. I’ve often heard these types of supervisors referred to as cheerleaders. That is, they try to catch someone doing something right and recognize it.

Unfortunately, we too often fall in to one of the first two traps. We should strive to be that “category three” supervisor.

True, recognition, like anything else if over done, can dilute its effectiveness. Finding that fine line between overuse and effective recognition is an art. But if you want to be a great artist, you have to practice.

Start by catching someone doing “right” and thank them for their contributions.

Have you recognized someone else’s efforts?

Plaques and coins are nice, but it doesn’t take a material item to show your appreciation ... a simple pat on the back will do.

AETC commander sends messages

Enjoy Independence Day by safely ‘taking care of our own’

Gen. Donald Cook
Air Education and Training Command commander

RANDOLPH AFB, Texas — Independence Day has always had a special meaning for Americans. We gather with family and friends, enjoy picnics and fireworks, and commemorate the founding of our great nation.

As is our tradition, we hoist the American flag as a way to mark not only our country’s birth, but to also remember those who created this great country and those who fought to keep it free.

More than 225 years have passed since that first Independence Day, and our nation has seen many military conflicts, from the American Revolution to the conflicts in the central Balkans. This Fourth of July is especially poignant, as we add to our memories those unforgettable images of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center, the Pentagon and the crash of a terrorist-held aircraft in a field in western Pennsylvania.

On this Fourth of July, as you prepare to spend time with your family and friends, set aside time to remember those who gave their lives in the name of liberty. Let’s resolve to never forget those who made the ultimate sacrifice for this great nation.

There are many times throughout the year to remember those who served in uniform, but there is only one day —

Independence Day — when all Americans truly do stand together with one goal in mind: to celebrate freedom. This belief and love of country is what binds us all.

My wife, Diane, and I join you in celebrating our country’s 226th birthday, the birthday of a great nation dedicated to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness for all.

AETC commander stresses ‘we take care of our own’

The Air Force lost seven people to accidental deaths June 22 and 23. Three of those people were young members of our AETC family who perished together in a single automobile accident.

This is shaping up to be one of the worst years for accidental deaths in the Air Force and we simply must reverse this very tragic trend. You’ve heard it time and again that our people are our most precious resource and we simply cannot take this situation casually.

As we enter the critical Fourth of July holiday weekend, all of us must redouble our efforts to do whatever is necessary to prevent further accidents. It is imperative we all take personal responsibility for the safety and well being of our fellow AETC family members.

Please stay involved with your people and impress upon them the absolute criticality of avoiding unsafe behavior and situations. It is more important than ever that we adhere to, and put into action that abiding Air Force precept — that we take care of our own.

Joint holiday message

James Roche
Secretary of the Air Force
Gen. John Jumper
Air Force Chief of Staff

WASHINGTON — On this day 226 years ago, an enlightened group of brave Americans signed a simple document declaring their commitment to a set of truths that formed the foundation of our enduring democracy. In doing so, they risked much, including their lives.

“From that day forward, another devoted group of brave Americans, the servicemen and women of this country, have risked much, including their lives, to defend our nation and our principles. From our War of Independence through the storied battles that have shaped the character, spirit and destiny of our nation, America has sacrificed her sons and daughters to defend our undeniable rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

“On the Fourth of July, we celebrate these rights and our freedom with picnics, parades and fireworks, as we have for many years. This year, however, our celebration takes on a renewed significance. Enemies of freedom have attacked our nation and the fundamental principles for which we stand. And, in the tradition of those who have gone before, a new generation now wields the shield and the sword of our great democracy. Since we last celebrated this holiday, airmen have given their lives defending America. Remember them this Independence Day as well as those who stand guard while we celebrate our nation’s birthday.

“The American people depend on you and possess an unwavering faith in your abilities. Your courage, commitment and sacrifice keep us free. We are very proud of what you and your families endure to defend our nation, and are privileged to serve with you. We salute each and every one of you and wish you all a very happy Fourth of July!
